Dear Mr. Weisberg—

I had just had to write and tell you that I gave the speech on the assassination last night and it was pretty successful. I was so happy that I could communicate what I had to say, as I did.

After class many of the men said that they didn't know of all these things and that they intended to read up on it. It was twenty minutes long but in a short period like that you can hit on the main points and that in itself if you don't know much about it can prove to be quite shocking. I know from the time I saw Oswald's "press conference" that it wasn't him and even if it was he could never have done it alone, but when my brother wrote me of all the strange goings on in his usually somewhat heated style I just wasn't the same for a few days it had quite an effect. If I did that to one other person I'd be happy I think it was more though. I'll circulate your books around.

It's probably a silly thing to write of but really, I was so thrilled by the result.

Love Judy
